The Tropical Conservation Institute at Florida International University has the mission of addressing the critical issues driving wildlife extinctions and declines in biodiversity-rich ecosystems and training the next generation of conservation practitioners. Thus, we strive to deliver high-quality and affordable training to a broad audience of conservationists.

To address this mission, we will provide a limited number of scholarships to students and professionals who are not able to attend the workshop without financial support, thus, priority will be given to those with demonstrated need. Scholarships can cover enrollment fees, travel and/or lodging (only at the Kampong at a rate of $25/day for the duration of the workshop), depending on the requested budget and available funds.

To apply for a scholarship please follow the instructions bellow:

1. Send the following documents to tci@fiu.edu by March 1st:
  - a. 200-word essay on why you need this scholarship and how attending this workshop will contribute to your career path
  - b. Budget detailing how much support you need and for what expenses (note that we have a limited funding capacity for scholarships, so please limit the requested amount to what you absolutely need. If requesting travel expenses, include travel route)
  - c. 2-page CV
2. DO NOT enroll in the workshop. Once you send the requested documents you will enter the pool of scholarship applicants and will be automatically enrolled if you are granted a scholarship.
3. Incomplete applications or applications received after March 1st at 11:59pm EST will not be considered. No exceptions.
4. Scholarship notifications will be delivered after March 31st, once enrollment for this workshop is closed. Thus, participants who apply for a scholarship but do not receive one, will not be eligible to participate in the workshop.

Further questions should be sent to tci@fiu.edu.
